Spiral made from 36 bottles

Dandelion made from 200 fizzy drinks bottles

Bottle & CD Wind Sculptures

Our sculptures all move in the wind. We've been running wind workshops using recycled materials for over ten years.

Anyone can join in making the sculptures, whatever their age. As they participate, they watch the final artwork evolve from rubbish, usually thrown away, into something of great beauty. We bring some of the components with us, like CD windmills, but we also use things generated by the festival itself, such as empty fizzy drinks bottles.

Our mobile workshop contains materials and tools. We assemble the armature on site and using scissors, sticky-back plastic and a bit of engineering know-how, the children build the art work. When it's finished, the wind sculpture turns in the wind, even gentle ones, the translucent bottles projecting colour sparkling in every direction.
